Economic Development Task Force Interim Report

November 14, 2012

Members of the:

- Economic Development and Workforce Services Interim Committee;
- Health and Human Services Interim Committee; and
- Natural Resources, Agriculture, and Environment Interim Committee

We are pleased to provide you with a copy of the attached interim report of the Economic Development Task Force, prepared in accordance with 2012 General Session H.B. 28 "Economic Development Task Force." As provided in H.B. 28, the two-year task force will present its final report and recommendations in the fall of 2013.

Few things are more important to Utah families than the ability of its members to make a living. Sustained economic prosperity is the hope of every wage earner and wage earner's family. Job creators and job creator facilitators rely on the future success of the Utah, national, and international markets to drive investments and economic growth in Utah.

In its eight meetings held in-2012, the task force has discussed much about the "drivers" of economic development, air quality, and basic economics that will form a foundation for future progress by the task force and its final recommendations planned for fall 2013. The attached interim report outlines the topics discussed and presenters involved.

We would be happy to discuss any questions you may have as the work of the task force continues.

Sincerely,

Sen. Stuart Reid
Co-chair

Rep. Brad Wilson

Key Points Made to the Task Force in 2012

The key points made by the presenters include:

- Utah consistently ranks among the leading states for economic vitality based on several economic indicators.
- Economic development involves a number of issues including education, environment, local government services, manufacturing, natural resources, population growth, regulations, small business, tax policy, technology, tourism, public infrastructure, and transportation.
- More or better input equals more or better output, i.e., productivity is increased when investments are made in human capital (education and job training) and physical capital.
- Education plays a key role in preparing Utah's future workforce for tomorrow's jobs. Utah workers must be prepared to compete in tomorrow's job market.
- Productivity improvement results from achieving efficiency by investments in innovation and technology.
- Utah's tourism industry plays a vital role in representing the state both for attracting tourism and for attracting new business, industry, and talent to Utah. Tourism brings in an estimated $5.1 billion per year in traveler spending from out-of-state visitors.
- Poor air quality negatively impacts tourism, business recruiting, and employee retention efforts. Continuous efforts to improve air quality has significantly reduced the annual number of poor air quality days.
- Continuous effort is required to work with state and local government and private industry to attract and grow competitive, high-value companies and spur the development and expansion of local Utah businesses.
- By adding value from start to finish, manufacturing fuels economic growth in other sectors in the economy, including mining, transportation, warehousing, and retail.

Before November 30, 2013, the task force shall present a final report, including any proposed legislation, to the:

- Economic Development and Workforce Services Interim Committee
- Health and Human Services Interim Committee
