Utah Code Sections Affected:

ENACTS:

53H-3-610, Utah Code Annotated 1953

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the state of Utah:

Section 1. Section 53H-3-610 is enacted to read:

53H-3-610 . Incorporation of seminal documents in writing courses.

(1) As used in this section:

- (a) "Founding documents" means primary source documents that are foundational to the establishment and development of the United States of America, including:
  - (i) the Declaration of Independence;
  - (ii) the United States Constitution;
  - (iii) the Federalist Papers;

- 29           (iv) the Bill of Rights; and 30           (v) other documents identified by the board as foundational to American 31           constitutional history.
- 32       (b) "Presidential speeches" means speeches, addresses, or written messages by 33       presidents of the United States that address matters of national significance or 34       articulate principles of governance.
- 35       (c) "Seminal documents" means primary source documents of enduring significance to 36       American history, government, or civic discourse, including:
- 37           (i) founding documents;
38           (ii) presidential speeches;
39           (iii) Supreme Court opinions that establish major constitutional principles; and
40           (iv) other historical documents identified by the board that have shaped American 41           institutions or democratic traditions.
- 42       (d) "Writing course" means a general education course in which the primary focus is the 43       development of writing skills and that awards credit toward fulfilling the written 44       communication requirement described in board policy.
- 45       (2) Beginning in the 2026-27 academic year, the board shall establish a policy that:
- 46           (a) requires an institution of higher education to incorporate seminal documents into 47           writing courses where the institution and the course instructor determine the 48           incorporation is appropriate and advances the learning objectives of the course;
- 49           (b) encourages analytical writing assignments that use seminal documents as primary 50           sources to develop a student's skills in:
- 51               (i) close reading of primary source texts;
52               (ii) analysis of historical and rhetorical context;
53               (iii) synthesis of multiple sources; and
54               (iv) evidence-based argumentation;
- 55           (c) preserves the discretion of institutions of higher education and faculty members to:
- 56               (i) determine when and how to incorporate seminal documents into writing courses;
57               (ii) select specific seminal documents appropriate to course objectives;
58               (iii) design assignments that align with course objectives and student learning
59               outcomes; and
60               (iv) determine the format, length, and scope of number of assignments using seminal
61               documents; and
- 62           (d) maintains genre diversity in writing instruction by ensuring multiple forms of writing

- 63           are taught, including:
- 64           (i) narrative and creative writing;
- 65           (ii) technical and professional writing;
- 66           (iii) research writing;
- 67           (iv) digital and multimodal composition; and
- 68           (v) other genres appropriate to course objectives.
- 69    (3) The board may compile and maintain a list of seminal documents that institutions and
- 70       instructors may reference when incorporating seminal documents into writing courses.
- 71    (4) Beginning in the 2026-27 academic year, an institution of higher education may
- 72       voluntarily adopt structured writing course requirements similar to the following
- 73       requirements:
- 74       (a) incorporate seminal documents as described in this section;
- 75       (b) require students to complete at least three analytical writing assignments that use
- 76       seminal documents as primary sources for analysis;
- 77       (c) emphasize foundational thinking and communication skills through close reading and
- 78       analysis of primary texts, consistent with Subsection 53H-4-307.5(3)(c)(ii);
- 79       (d) encourage the use of seminal documents for additional writing assignments, class
- 80       discussions, and other pedagogical purposes beyond the minimum requirements
- 81       described in this Subsection (4);
- 82       (e) integrate, where appropriate, primary texts and source materials described in
- 83       Subsections 53H-4-307.5(3)(c)(iii) and 53H-4-307.5(3)(d)(iii); and
- 84       (f) develop in students the capacity to engage with complex texts, analyze historical and
- 85       rhetorical contexts, and articulate evidence-based arguments in writing.
- 86    (5) The board shall find an institution of higher education that adopts structured
- 87       requirements under Subsection (4) as in compliance with the policy established under
- 88       Subsection (2).

89           Section 2. Effective Date.

90           This bill takes effect on May 6, 2026.
