3. St. George, Utah

Percent growth: 3.5

2018 population: 171,700

The southwestern Utah city of St. George has a large percentage of part-time residents, who own a second home there to visit over the winter. Many new residents are coming from Las Vegas, Southern California and Northern Utah, according to The Spectrum.

10. Provo-Orem, Utah

Percent growth: 2.6

2018 population: 633,768

Provo-Orem, Utah, has seen major population growth over recent years largely due to its booming technology sector. According to Deseret News, the metro area's neighboring Salt Lake County has been experiencing a housing shortage, leading more people to settle down in Provo-Orem.
