

HB317 - Clarifying the Definition of Social Health

One's ability to successfully build, maintain, and improve mutually beneficial relationships with, but not limited to, family, friends, peers, co-workers, online connections, the broader community and their environment— all while pursuing an optimal relationship with oneself.

Utah State Board of Education

What HB317 Does:

Social Health is recognized as the third pillar of overall wellbeing, together with Physical and Mental Health. The term 'Social Health' already exists many places in Utah education standards however, it is not defined in our Code anywhere.

HB317 simply establishes an objective, observable definition of "social health," preventing the introduction of ideological or agenda-driven beliefs under the guise of social health, while promoting observable and objective skills and practices that help students build and maintain mutually beneficial relationships.

Todd Cornberg- Principal

Gene King- Principal

Jacinto Peterson- Principal

Mellissa Judy- Vice Principal

Julie Sherzinger- Public Education Administrator

Reed Erikson- Track coach High School Teacher

Cindy Watkins-School Counselor and Social Wellness Teacher

Jen Glassy- Fashion and Social Wellness Teacher

Tamara Oborn- Social Health and Positive Psychology Teacher

Ron McBride- Former University of Utah Head Football coach

Elesha Steinfeld- Social Health teacher and Soccer Coach

Fisi Moleni-Licensed Clinical Social worker

Reno Mahe-Former BYU and NFL football player

Heidi Swapp- Businesswoman