New Services or Benefit

Public Benefit:

Purpose: It is our understanding that the purpose of this program is to establish a pilot program for a Home Energy Rating System. This system may be helpful for providing the real estate market additional information about the energy attributes of homes.

Services: Establishment of a home energy rating system and reporting system pilot.

Expected Outcome: Better information about how home energy rating systems can be deployed in Utah to increase the availability of energy information to the market.

Implementations and Resources: OED will work with the sponsor and proposed Advisory Committee to develop resources that can provide energy ratings to the homes in the pilot study estimated to be 667.

How: OED will work with the sponsor and proposed Advisory Committee to develop resources that can provide energy ratings to the homes in the pilot study estimated to be 667.

Performance Measures

Goal

Title: Voluntary Home Energy Information Pilot Program.

Description: Home energy assessments and reports to describe energy consumption, generation, and efficiency of a building.

Collection Method: Potentially leveraging existing U.S. DOE models. OED will work with the proposed Advisory Committee to determine the best collection method.
