Section 3. Section 30-3-5.3 is enacted to read:

30-3-5.3. Alimony.

(1) As used in this section:

(a) "Cohabit" means two non-related persons living together in a romantic relationship.

(b) "Fault" means any action that affects the mental, physical, or emotional condition of a party being awarded alimony or the person ordered to pay alimony that reduces that party's ability to earn income at the party's full capability. Fault may include sexual intimacy with another person, severe physical or mental abuse, addiction to pornography, or other action that causes the marriage to end.

(c) "Self-sufficiency" means the ability to support oneself at the level that the parties were living at the time of the ~~{divorce}~~separation taking into consideration the loss of available money due to the costs incurred in supporting separate households.

(2) In any temporary orders or final decree of divorce, the court may order a party to pay alimony to the other party, taking into consideration the following factors:

(a) the financial condition and needs of the recipient party;

(b) the recipient's earning capacity or ability to produce income;

(c) the ability of the payor party to provide support;

SB0096S03 compared with SB0096S02

(d) the length of the marriage;

(e) whether the recipient has custody of minor children requiring support;

(f) whether the recipient worked in a business owned or operated by the payor; ~~{and}~~

(g) whether the recipient directly contributed to any increase in the payor's skill by paying for education received by the payor or allowing the payor to attend school during the marriage ~~{,}; and~~

(h) whether the recipient has stayed home to care for their minor children by joint agreement of the parties.

(3) Any temporary order of alimony may be modified at the time of the trial ~~{and; under proper circumstances, retroactive back to the original}~~ when there are gross misrepresentations of the income of either party or the temporary ~~{orders}~~ order reserves the issue of alimony to be reviewed at the trial.

(4) The court may consider fault of the parties in determining alimony.

(5) The court may not order a spouse who has been the victim of domestic violence to pay alimony to the other spouse if the other spouse is convicted of the crime of domestic violence, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(6) As a general rule, the court should look to the standard of living existing at the time of separation in determining alimony.

(a) The court shall consider all relevant facts and equitable principles and may, in its discretion, base alimony on the standard of living that existed at the time of trial.

(b) In marriages of short duration, when no children have been conceived or born during the marriage, the court may consider the standard of living that existed at the time of the marriage.

(c) The court may, under appropriate circumstances, attempt to equalize the parties' respective standards of living.

(7) When a marriage of long duration dissolves on the threshold of a major change in the income of one of the spouses due to the collective efforts of both, that change shall be considered in dividing the marital property and in determining the amount of alimony. If one party's earning capacity has been greatly enhanced through the efforts of both parties during the marriage, the court may make a compensating adjustment in dividing the marital property and awarding alimony.

SB0096S03 compared with SB0096S02

(8) (a) The court has continuing jurisdiction to make substantive changes and new orders regarding alimony based on a substantial material change in circumstances not foreseeable at the time of the divorce.

(b) The court may not modify alimony or issue a new order for alimony to address needs of the recipient that did not exist at the time the decree was entered, unless the court finds extenuating circumstances that justify that action.

(c) In determining alimony, the income of any subsequent spouse of the payor may not be considered, except as provided in this Subsection (8)(c).

(i) The court may consider the subsequent spouse's financial ability to share living expenses.

(ii) The court may consider the income of a subsequent spouse if the court finds that the payor's improper conduct justifies that consideration.

(9) Alimony may not be ordered for a duration longer than the number of years that the marriage existed unless, at any time prior to termination of alimony, the court finds extenuating circumstances that justify the payment of alimony for a longer period of time.

(10) A party seeking alimony in an amount in excess of $1,000 per month for at least 60 months shall submit, along with the financial declaration and settlement proposal when the case is certified as ready for trial, a plan detailing a course of action the recipient will undertake in order to try to become more self-sufficient or specific facts that demonstrate why the recipient is not able to become more self-sufficient, unless the parties have reached a stipulation regarding alimony. The court may waive this requirement if it makes specific findings that the recipient is not able to become more self-sufficient. Unless the court orders otherwise, alimony in excess of $1,000 per month for more than 60 months may not be awarded if a plan is not submitted.

(11) If the court determines that the recipient party has the ability to become more self-sufficient, it may order that the amount of alimony be increased by a certain amount over a specified time period to allow the recipient time to pursue training or education necessary to become more self-sufficient. The court shall take a number of factors into consideration when determining how long it may take a recipient to become more self-sufficient. The factors shall include:

(a) the age of the recipient;

SB0096S03 compared with SB0096S02

(b) the educational background of the recipient;

(c) whether there are minor children still in the recipient's household; and

(d) any difficulty the recipient might face in obtaining training or education necessary to become self-sufficient.

(12) ~~{Any}~~Where the income generated ~~{in fact or by imputation}~~ by the recipient ~~{may be used to}~~has increased at least $1,000 from the last determination of income a court may reduce the alimony ~~{received}~~paid by $100 per month for every $200 per month of income generated or imputed to the recipient unless the court finds otherwise.

(13) Unless a decree of divorce specifically provides otherwise, any order of the court that a party pay alimony to the other party automatically terminates upon the remarriage of the recipient or the death of either party. If the remarriage is annulled or found to be void ab initio, payment of alimony shall resume if the payor is made a party to the action of annulment, the payor's rights are presented, and the court finds that restoring the prior alimony order would not be fair.

(14) (a) Any order of the court that a party pay alimony to a former spouse may be ~~{modified}~~reduced or terminated by the court if the party paying alimony establishes that the recipient is cohabiting with another person.

(b) There is a rebuttable presumption that, if a person spends seven or more nights in a 14-day period at a common residence with a person with whom they have a romantic relationship, the two persons are cohabiting.

(15) This section applies to all divorces filed on or after May 10, 2011, and all divorce actions not final as of May 10, 2011.
