MORNING SESSION

House Chamber
State Capitol
Salt Lake City, Utah
January 19, 2021

The House was called to order by Congressman Rob Bishop, former U.S. Representative and former Speaker of the Utah House of Representatives.

PRAYER BY THE MOST REVEREND OSCAR A. SOLIS
BISHOP OF THE DIOCESE OF SALT LAKE CITY

My dear and sovereign God, we glorify your holy name and thank you for bringing us together today on the dawn of the new year where elected public servants are given the distinct privilege to help build our State of Utah as a reflection of your kingdom on earth. We implore you to bless them with the virtues of humility, patience and the fortitude they need to enact the laws that promote the common good, plus through peace, justice, and equality, as well as respecting experiences and contributions of each race, gender, ethnicity, ability, orientation, and division.

Inspire their minds to imbibe your love in their hearts to carry out their duties responsibly mindful of the sanctity of life in every age and stage. And include the dignity of every human person. Empower them with your grace to honor the sacred words of all people especially the poor; the most vulnerable and marginalized of all society, ensuring that their voices are heard and represented and their needs are met in their decision-making. Together, Lord, we pray for the safety, health, and welfare of all our legislators, their staff, and all residents of our beautiful state. Make them beacons of hope and instruments of reconciliation and unity during these challenging times so together we can help eradicate the culture of death and division that permeates our world in the forms of racism, poverty, violence and degradation against your creation. With gratitude and humility we ask for your blessings on this body and the State of Utah as we begin the 2021 Legislative Session. May they and all of us align ourselves with the invincible light of God's love which endures even in the darkness of nights. Grant our prayer, trusting and confident in your Lord's goodness and mercy forever and ever, Amen

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS

Former Congressman Rob Bishop administered the Oath of Office to the re-elected and newly-elected members of the House of Representatives.

Roll call showed all members present, except Representative Jon Hawkins and Representative Stephanie Pitcher, excused.

On motion of Representative Brian King, the House voted to nominate Brad R. Wilson as Speaker of the House for the 64th Legislature.

On motion of Representative Francis Gibson, the House voted to elect Brad Wilson, by acclamation, as Speaker of the House for the 64th Legislature.

Former Congressman Rob Bishop administered the Oath of Office to Speaker Brad R. Wilson.

REMARKS BY SPEAKER BRAD R. WILSON

My fellow members of the Utah House of Representatives, welcome to the 2021 General Legislative Session.

I would say it is great to see all your smiling faces but I'll settle for saying that it is great to see you masked up and ready to work.

I thank my good friend, Congressman Rob Bishop, for joining us today and for administering the oath of office. As you know, Congressman Bishop just retired after serving nine terms in the U.S. House of Representatives. Before that, Rob served in this body for 16 years, including two years as Speaker of the House. Most importantly, he was a public school teacher for nearly three decades. Please join me in giving Congressman Bishop a round of applause to thank him for his decades of devoted public service. Thank you.

I also want to take this opportunity to congratulate our new governor, Spencer Cox, and express our commitment to working with him, Lt. Governor Deidre Henderson and their administration to serve the people of our state. We look forward to welcoming Governor Cox to hear the State of the State address later this week.

As we open this general legislative session, we do so with a heavy heart.

Just prior to the new year, Representative LaWanna Shurtliff succumbed to pneumonia. Known to her colleagues and friends as "Lou," she served two stints in this Chamber from 1999–2008 and was elected again a decade later. Her service to the people of Utah went well beyond the Legislature as she taught thousands of students English, accounting and business at Ogden High School for nearly three decades. We are joined in the gallery by her son, Scot, and her daughter, Stacey, who led us in the pledge this morning. On behalf of the entire House, we express our condolences to her family and I ask that we all pause for a moment of silence to honor our friend and colleague. Thank you.

2020 was a tragic year for the world, for our country, and for our state. More than a thousand Utah families – including several in this body – lost loved ones. Thousands more have faced serious health challenges due to COVID-19. As we meet, one of our colleagues is in the hospital right now due to COVID and we pray for his swift recovery.

As vaccines begin to be administered across the state, now is not the time to let our guard down. As we spend the next 45 days in close quarters, we must remember that some among our colleagues and staff – and their families – have conditions that put them at increased risk of complications if infected. Under these far less than ideal circumstances, we should all do our part to protect one another so we can continue the work of the people of Utah. Beyond the physical effects of COVID, the global pandemic has caused widespread economic hardship, social disruption, and mental health issues. Discouraging news about the pandemic, natural disasters, and civil unrest have seemed to arrive at a tempo that left moments of reprieve few and far between. But in the midst of all this tragedy, we have seen Utahns facing adversity with determination, overcoming challenges with innovation, and lifting others with compassion.

As I have thought about the ability of the people of our state to rise in moments of trial, my mind's eye turned to an image from nearly twenty years ago. A flame, slowly rising above the streets of Salt Lake City until it lit the Olympic torch to open the 2002 Winter Games. In 1980, that same group of men who lit the torch that night – found themselves in a small, smelly locker room in Lake Placid, New York. They were 23 college kids – moments away – from facing the greatest hockey team ever assembled. On the line, a shot at the gold medal.

How good were the Soviets? They had won four straight Olympic gold medals and had beaten the U.S. team 10–3 just two weeks prior. That American team had worked, practiced and sweat together. They had done all they could to put themselves in the Gold Medal Game but they still needed everything to go their way just to have a chance. In the moments before they took the ice, Team USA head coach, the late Herb Brooks, opened what may be considered the most important pep talk in the history of sports, with these words:

“Great moments are born from great opportunity.”

That group of boys went toe-to-toe with the Soviet juggernaut that night, culminating in an astonishing victory in what we now call the Miracle on Ice. Over the past few days, I've had those words running through my mind as I think about Utah's situation.

"Great moments are born from great opportunity."

My friends, despite some significant challenges – daunting challenges – this is a time of great opportunity for our state. And we, as a Legislature, have a tremendous responsibility to create an environment in which Utahns have the freedom and ability to improve their lives and for succeeding generations to partake in prosperity. We are going to work harder and smarter than we've ever worked; and we are going to come together like never before because the moment demands nothing less.

"Great moments are born from great opportunity."

It has been inspiring to see the people of our state embrace disruption with innovation and adapt since the word "pandemic" became a part of our lexicon. Businesses have found new ways to safely provide goods and services to their customers and have kept our economy moving forward. Teachers, students and parents have embraced new technologies and faced challenging circumstances with fortitude, ensuring Utah's children continue to receive the education they deserve. Our dedicated health professionals have worked well past the point of exhaustion to protect the lives of their patients. And ordinary citizens and families have found ways to not only cope with isolation but to reach out and bring our community closer together in a time of unprecedented division across the country. They all deserve our admiration and our sincere gratitude.

I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you for your dedicated service. As a legislative body, we made some important and timely adjustments to allow us to function during the pandemic. Due to the thoughtful planning of our predecessors and the hard work of public servants, state employees, and Utah citizens, our state proved well-prepared to handle an emergency. However, as time wore on, it became clear we need an exhaustive effort to review and update our plans and procedures for navigating an ongoing crisis like a pandemic.

During this session, let's provide clear direction on what constitutes an emergency, what authority that triggers, and how long it should last. No emergency should usurp the power of the people, nor should it dismiss the need for transparency and accountability for actions taken in times of crisis.

There are other significant challenges facing us as a state beyond the immediate crisis we've been dealing with the past year. Decades of smart policy from this body have prepared us to face these challenges, and now the "best-managed state in the nation" is perfectly positioned to accelerate while others retrench. This year presents a unique opportunity to do three things that will further cement Utah's position as the brightest star on the flag:

Let's:

- Broaden our Economic Success
- Invest in Infrastructure

And

- Extend Opportunity to All

Economic Development

I want to begin with broadening our economic success. Hard work and innovation are the fuel that drives our economy. Two sessions ago, the Legislature set aside 80 million dollars for tax relief. Let's finish what we started and work to find the most appropriate way to provide that relief. Now is the time to put this money back in the hands of the people of our state. For a decade, our state worked to cultivate the most business-friendly environment in the nation. Although we proved effective in attracting jobs and investment, we still have significant room for improvement. Let's work together to create a new chapter in our economic prosperity playbook;

- 1) one that rewards all businesses looking to grow in our state,
- 2) one that makes this more than just the place to add jobs, but the right place to anchor thriving enterprises;
- 3) and one that creates opportunities in rural Utah and incentivizes remote work that takes jobs to where our people live.

During this session, let's also lay the groundwork for a thorough, legislative-led review of regulation that carries through this year's interim sessions and seeks input from the businesses that power our economy. Let's look at how a regulatory sandbox can cultivate innovation. In a hyper-competitive marketplace, we simply cannot afford to crush new industries before they can even get off the ground – by forcing them to fit into a regulatory framework that has never envisioned the innovations of tomorrow's economy.

Infrastructure

The second, related area of focus is infrastructure. An ambitious vision can only become a reality when it is built on a solid foundation. Our commitment to investing in and preserving critical infrastructure is that foundation. As our state grows, so must our capacity to connect people and the goods they require. Our investment in roads and rail has been an often-underappreciated element of our economic success – and we will not ease up in our commitment to preventing the gridlock that would bring our economy to a halt.

Just as important is our investment in outdoor recreation opportunities that make life in Utah great. We love our state and national parks. So do thousands of visitors from around the globe. With more visitors than we can handle, now is the time to make the necessary investment to give access to all who wish to experience Utah's natural beauty.

Water is a perennial issue for our state. The time has come to get serious about water projects that have been talked about so extensively for so long they seem mythical. Let's reach out to our neighboring states and work toward a solution that will ensure Utahns have access to the water we need and that is rightfully ours. The Colorado River Compact allocates more water to Utah than we currently take and the process to change that begins now.

As we consider further investment in infrastructure, we should embrace opportunities to equip rural Utah with greater access to broadband internet, 5G technology, and other tools that will enable those living off the Wasatch Front to do work that previously required them to relocate.

Now is the moment to put Utah's triple-A bond rating to use to enhance the critical infrastructure that moves our people, elevates our outdoor recreation opportunities, supports our natural resources, and enhances our economy.

Extend Opportunity to All

The past year brought more issues to the forefront than just the pandemic. Growing division in communities across the country was evident in Utah, as well.

Just over a month ago, Senate President Adams and I joined other elected officials, business leaders, and community advocates in signing The Utah Compact on Racial Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion. This document states clearly that Utah is dedicated to principles and actions that create equal opportunity. Government can't solve all of society's problems – nor should it. But where we have determined it is appropriate for government to act, we can and should do a far better job of building a system in which people have equal opportunity and are better able to help themselves. During this session, and in the months and years ahead, let's focus on education, housing, and health in order to become a more equitable and inclusive state.

First, education. Every single student deserves the opportunity to gain a quality education no matter where they live. For a student to thrive in the dynamic 21st century, that education must include reading, writing and arithmetic but that's not good enough. In an age when we can access any fact by asking our phones, students need to develop critical thinking skills, financial literacy, and an appreciation of their civic responsibility. Above all, that education must be readily available to students in every classroom, in every district across our state, regardless of their zip code. Too often our students graduate from high school without a clear understanding of what their talents are or how those talents can be developed into marketable skills. This is costing us dearly.

In Utah, only 51% of high school graduates enroll in post secondary education within three years – well below the national average. Let's look for innovative ways to help students understand why they are learning what they are taught in school and help them see the possibilities that lie before them. College access advisors have the ability to make an outsized impact on our education system by helping students make more informed choices that put them on an efficient path to the knowledge and skills to build prosperous lives.

Last fall, lawmakers, education leaders, and voters came together to make education funding a top priority. This year, we will increase our financial commitment to education by over 400 million dollars. And we will utilize our available resources to help our students discover their aptitudes and set themselves on a course that fits their interests and abilities. Doing so is the only surefire way to unlock the vast reserves of untapped potential so abundant in the youth of our state.

Next, housing. The term “starter home” has a very different meaning today than it did a decade ago. Over these past ten years, average home prices in our state have risen more than twice as fast as our median income. Rising home values are good for homeowners. However, the lack of homes priced for those looking to buy for the first time and for those who need more affordable options creates real challenges for thousands of Utahns, including our children and grandchildren.

This is an issue that warrants our immediate attention. Already, members of this body have opened bill files to address our housing affordability challenge by reducing regulations that prevent existing housing options – like accessory dwelling units – from relieving stress on the overall market. No doubt, innovative ideas will come to the forefront as we employ our best thinking to create workable solutions.

And finally, physical and mental health are also critical elements of Utah's prosperity. But today, we have more uninsured children per capita than any other state in the nation. The House is leading an effort to change that. We are working with the state health department to help families of uninsured children access available resources for coverage, including CHIP.

Our state's health depends on more than just physical well-being. Today, we have a clearer understanding of the importance of long-stigmatized mental health issues and how to treat mental illness without hiding it away. How many people will be in need of mental health treatment due to the pressures of the pandemic? How many people can we better serve by redirecting them from the criminal justice system to mental health treatment? And how many lives can we save by better addressing the mental health challenges of Utah students? The time has come to invest in a comprehensive approach to address mental health challenges.

As a conservative I see this approach to addressing education, health, and housing as critical to our ongoing effort to more effectively serve those we've been elected to represent. As the leader of a bipartisan body I see it as a noble effort in which we must all engage. And as a lifelong Utahn I see it as the mission to which we must all commit – in order to make our state a bastion of opportunity and a refuge for those looking to make the most of what they have.

“Great moments are born from great opportunity, and that's what you have here.”

Each of you has stepped forward to serve and to lead. We will face the challenges and we will seize the opportunity. Let's think broadly, debate vigorously, and do the hard work. May God bless us in that effort. And may God continue to bless the Great State of Utah.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS

On motion of Representative Gibson, the House voted to print Speaker Wilson's remarks and the prayer given by Bishop Solis upon the pages of the House Journal.

On motion of Representative Mike Schultz, the House voted to authorize Speaker Wilson to appoint a committee to meet with a like committee from the Senate to wait upon the Governor to inform him that the Legislature is organized and ready to receive any communication or message he may have to offer. Speaker Wilson appointed Representatives Albrecht, Shipp, and Harrison.

On motion of Representative Karen Kwan, the House voted to authorize Speaker Wilson to appoint a committee to notify the Senate to inform that Honorable Body that the House is organized and ready to do business. Speaker Wilson appointed Representatives Stratton, Johnson, and Wheatley.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker:

January 19, 2021

The Senate passed, H.C.R. 7, CONCURRENT RESOLUTION RECOGNIZING THE PUBLIC SERVICE OF REPRESENTATIVE LAWANNA LOU SHURTLIFF, by Representative C. Moss, which has been signed by the President and it is transmitted for the signature of the Speaker.

Jennifer Storie

Secretary of the Senate

Communication filed. The bill was signed by the Speaker and referred to staff for enrolling and transmission to the Governor.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS

On motion of Representative Gibson, and at 12:00 p.m., the House voted to recess until 2:15 p.m.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The House was called to order by Speaker Wilson at 2:19 p.m.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

On motion of Representative Gibson, the Legislature resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole for the purpose of hearing Chief Justice Matthew Durrant's State of the Judiciary address.

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY BY CHIEF JUSTICE MATTHEW DURRANT

I'm pleased to join you virtually with my colleagues Associate Chief Justice Thomas Lee, and Justices Deno Himonas, John Pearce, and Paige Petersen. They are good and honorable people, and it is a great privilege to serve with them.

In the course of the past year, our world has changed in ways we could not have imagined. We've moved much of our lives from the real world to the virtual world. Small things that we took for granted—a warm embrace, a casual meal with friends, a family vacation, and so many more—have been made much more precious to us, things to be longed for, dreamed about.

We've all been witness to the terrible toll this virus has taken in lives, health, and treasure. But amid the devastation wrought by the pandemic, heroes have emerged—health workers, first responders, police officers, delivery people, and many others who risk their health to see that basic needs are met.

The virus has presented an unprecedented challenge to businesses of all sizes, but small business owners have borne the brunt of its effects. Our hearts go out to all who've lost businesses, lost jobs, and, of course, especially to those who have lost family members or friends.

The public sector, too, has been presented with unprecedented and unimagined challenges. Our Utah state government plays a critical role in the lives of every Utah citizen. Each of our three branches of government has faced the daunting challenge of how to continue to deliver essential services to the people of Utah without unduly endangering the lives of those who serve in government or the lives of the citizens they serve.

You, our legislature, under the strong leadership of President Adams and Speaker Wilson, acted with alacrity and foresight in scaling back our state budget and in allocating the federal funds that have been made available to our state. You have played a critical role in leading our state through this crisis.

Our executive branch, too, has provided much-needed leadership. Governor Herbert and now Governor Cox have faced daunting and difficult decisions, the kinds of decisions that will never leave everyone happy, but I'm confident they have made each of them with the state's best interests at heart.

We in the judiciary have faced our own set of daunting and difficult decisions. Any report on the state of our judiciary in the year of the pandemic will, of course, be primarily about how we as a branch have responded to this earthshaking event. So I will begin with this—I am deeply and unreservedly proud of how our judges and staff have acquitted themselves during this turbulent time. They have risen to the challenge and more. I am especially grateful for the yeoman work done by our judicial council, our supreme court, and our state court administrator, Judge Mary Noonan, in leading us through this crisis.

By mid-April, we were able to move almost all of the court system online, with all of our courts holding virtual hearings and trials, a herculean task accomplished with breakneck speed by our IT department under the able leadership of Heidi Anderson. To give you some sense of the scope of this effort, these virtual hearings and trials have involved over 400,000 individual participants.¹

And even more remarkably, we have been able to largely keep pace, at all court levels, with our pre-pandemic caseload. The appellate courts haven't missed a step. And our juvenile courts are functioning at near 100% of our pre-pandemic standard. We've also seen our district courts largely keep pace with pre-pandemic metrics, with two significant exceptions: the age of pending cases and the conducting of jury trials. While we continue to see the vast majority of cases resolve within established case processing timelines, those cases are still taking longer to resolve and we are setting dates that extend further into the future than was typical of our pre-pandemic calendaring practices. And more significantly, the inability to safely conduct jury trials—especially in criminal and tort cases—is creating a considerable backlog. This is a source of great concern to me and to all our judges.

We have held trials to the bench throughout the pandemic. But jury trials pose significant challenges not attendant to judge trials. On the one hand, individuals are constitutionally entitled to jury trials, and, in criminal trials, their very freedom may be at stake. On the other hand, we as a court system, have an obligation to ensure that the public and our employees are not put at undue risk. This obligation is heightened by the fact that we as judges have the power to force potential jurors to come to our courthouses, potentially putting themselves at risk of illness or even death. To provide some sense of the number of individuals involved, in fiscal year 2019, more than 42,000 people reported to courthouses across the state to be considered for jury service in the district courts. Sitting shoulder-to-shoulder for several hours during the jury selection process, over 2,900 of those individuals were ultimately selected and deliberated as jurors. Many of these people were members of vulnerable demographic groups. As an additional complicating factor, holding jury trials virtually presents technical and constitutional problems that are not presented by judge trials.

Our judicial council continually monitors the state of the virus on a county by county basis. We have been working for some time in conjunction with the chief medical officer and the chief epidemiologist at the University of Utah to find ways that we can safely resume jury trials. I want to publicly thank them for their assistance. I also want to thank the professionals at our state Department of Health, and those working at local health departments all across Utah, for providing us invaluable data and guidance. We are committed to resuming trials in a way that takes every precaution to protect the health of jurors, and all other participants in the trial process.

As you might expect in the year of the virus, the bulk of our budget requests are for investment in technology. As difficult as it has been to move a state-wide court system from a real to a virtual environment, that transition will no doubt have long-term benefits for both the court and the public. During the last legislative session, you funded our IT requests. This funding was understandably reversed as part of the June special session budget reductions. We are now renewing our request for funds to hire additional IT developers, as well as funds to enhance our online court assistance program. We also seek funds to firm up our cybersecurity infrastructure and increase the network bandwidth in our rural courthouses.

In addition to these technology funding requests, we are asking for funding for our new Public Outreach Coordinator (something I'll speak about shortly), funding to enable our judges to receive and consider information regarding out-of-state criminal history when making their bail decisions, funding to assist us in retaining and recruiting court commissioners, and funding to educate our employees so they can take on leadership roles in the court system. Our requests amount to $1,935,000 in ongoing funding and $10,000 in one-time funding. We are always careful as a branch not to overreach in our budget requests. This is why we have limited our requests to only those that we believe truly justify the expenditure of sacred tax-payer funds. I hope you will see fit to fund these requests.

During this past year, we have all had occasion to think deeply about the critical need for fairness in our society. I commend those responsible for preparing and supporting the Utah Compact on Racial Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion, which has been endorsed by many government and community leaders. The judiciary shares this commitment. We are devoted to ensuring that all who seek justice in our judicial system are treated with respect, fairness, and impartiality. We recognize that many Utahans are intimidated by the judicial process. In fact, many feel they have been left behind by government generally. And they lack confidence in governmental institutions. This is especially true of those from marginalized communities. Many worry they will be disadvantaged in the court system by their race, gender, socioeconomic status, or some combination of these or other inappropriate factors. We feel a compelling need to communicate to those who feel they have been left behind by society that they will not be left behind by our court system. We want them to know that a court is a sanctuary, a place where they can go to seek remedy for wrongs done them, to seek vindication of their rights, and to seek justice; a place where they will be on equal footing with every other Utah citizen; a place where they will find a judge who is committed to treating them with dignity and respect, and to ensuring that their basic rights are protected.

And those are the kinds of judges we have in Utah's judiciary. I believe that all of our judges are committed to discharging their duties in a fair and impartial way devoid of bias. But we have come to understand as judges that bias can work its way into our decision-making even at a subconscious level. We are, after all, the product of our own lived experiences and environments. We must have the humility as judges to acknowledge this and endeavor to identify any potential biases, even subliminal or implicit ones, so that we might root them out of our judgment process. The same is true for all employees of the judicial branch, from judicial assistants, to juvenile probation officers, to administrators. Each of us, no matter our position with the courts, must recognize the need to eliminate potential bias as we strive, consistent with our mission statement, to deliver “an open, fair, efficient, and independent system for the advancement of justice under the law.” As a result of our deeply-held desire to ensure that our judges and employees are as impartial as is humanly possible and to assure the public, especially marginalized communities, that this is the case, we have created a new office in the judiciary—an Office of Fairness and Accountability and, within that office, the position of Public Outreach Coordinator. We, as a judicial branch, are committed to holding ourselves accountable, and to reaching out to the public with a message that in Utah’s court system everyone will be treated with the respect and dignity that is owed them as citizens and as human beings. Public trust is the currency of the judiciary. We are committed to being worthy of that trust.

At this difficult time, many of our public institutions are viewed with suspicion and skepticism. But when I look around me, I see public servants, whether in your branch, the executive branch, or the judicial branch, who are hard-working and committed to serving the public. We are now, more than ever, all in this together. It is my hope and my prayer that we can work together to honor the sacred trust placed in us by the citizens of our great state. I wish you the very best in the important work you will do this session. Thank you for your dedicated service.
